

MR. COPPOCK: Hi, Cary Coppock. That's C-O-P-P-O-C-K, is the last name. C-A-R-Y, first name.

I am here today, have several facets of interest in this, but today representing the U.S. National Arboretum and I submitted comments in November and was able to get back the response to those. I will say that I remain concerned about a particular issue.

We have a lot of green space and we would hope that the National Arboretum will be maybe a shining example even, but at least an example of how we want more and more of this city to look. And we don't have a way, that I know, to demonstrate disconnectedness to reduce our fees.

So, I remain concerned about that and I would like to have an opportunity to discuss that with DDOE staff at a future date, if possible, a very near future date, of course, and I will do what I can to facilitate that.

Thank you.

MR. COPPOCK: And I appreciate the openness of this process. I think you guys are doing a great job actually.
