SECTION C
DESCRIPTION/SPECIFICATIONS/ STATEMENT OF WORK

C.1 BACKGROUND

- C.1.1 In 2007, the District of Columbia Child and Family Agency (CFSA) conducted a comprehensive Needs Assessment of the mental health needs of children in the custody of the District of Columbia's child welfare system. This assessment was the first of its kind and offered information regarding the mental and behavioral health needs and services for children in the foster care system. This information is intended to inform plans to strengthen the service delivery structure and expand the array of services and supports for Child and Family Services Agency (CFSA) clients. As a result of the assessment, CFSA in collaboration with the Department of Mental Health (DMH), a team of stakeholders, and the local Medicaid office developed a mental health services multi-year plan which prioritizes a varied array of mental health services and supports to implement over several years. This Plan includes Outcomes to be Achieved, Outcomes to be Maintained and a Strategy to Enhance Capacity of Mental Health Providers, Expand the Service Array and Improve Children's Mental Health Services Infrastructure at the Department of Mental Health.
- C.1.2 Research reveals that the range of children entering foster care with significant mental health problems is anywhere from 35 to 85 percent. The incidence of emotional, behavioral and developmental problems, among children in foster care is three to six times greater than in children in the community. Externalizing disorders—such as disruptive behaviors, delinquency, hyperactivity and aggression—are more common in foster children. Findings also suggests that mental health service utilization by children in foster care is high relative to other children, and varies among foster care children depending on factors such as age, gender, ethnicity and type of placement. Predictors of higher mental health service use among foster children include age (being older); gender (being male); placement in non-relative foster care; and being removed from the home because of physical or sexual abuse.
- C.1.3 A review of the literature to identify treatment programs and evidence based practices such as Parent-Child Interaction Therapy that have been shown to be effective in treating children and youth and their families that are involved in the child welfare system

C.2 INTRODUCTION

- C.2.1 Mental and behavioral health issues are a vital aspect of the health and well-being for children within the District of Columbia child welfare system. Children, youth, and families engaged in the child welfare system require a diverse array of services to help reduce maltreatment, stabilize children in safe environments, and address trauma of individual clients resulting from neglect and/or abuse. Parent-Child Interaction Therapy (PCIT) is an empirically-supported treatment for conduct-disordered young children that place emphasis on improving the quality of the parent-child relationship and changing parent-child interaction patterns. In PCIT, parents are taught specific skills to establish a nurturing and secure relationship with their child while increasing their child's pro-social behavior and decreasing negative behavior. This treatment focuses on two basic interactions: Child Directed Interaction (CDI) is similar to play therapy in that parents engage their child in a play situation with the goal of strengthening the parent-child relationship; Parent Directed Interaction (PDI) resembles clinical behavior therapy in that parents learn to use specific behavior management techniques as they play with their child.
